A member recently wrote to ask about Fairfax Cryobank and which other clinics they have bought up or sold sperm for. Here is the information that we've collected about who shares/sells/buys sperm: <ul style="list-style-type: none"><li>-CCB affiliates are Procreative Technologies (St. Louis, MO), Palo Alto, CA, Los Angeles, CA, and Cambridge, MA.</li><li>-Kaiser Permanente in San Francisco used to use Procreative Technologies, which later was sold to CCB. The Denver Kaiser used CCB.</li></ul>

My donor donated at two banks and the profiles differ in dates, siblings, height and weight. Among other things. I think the donor was honest because on the typed profile things were more peachy. On the one in his hand writing it sounds more truthful. Has any one else experienced something like this. The banks are Procreative Tech (typed profile) CCB (handwritten profile).

It seems so many banks are related to one another. When I initially joined the DSR I searched through donor descriptions and that is how I found my first match. Donor #### CCB was formerly Donor ### of Procreative Technologies of Los Angeles. Before that the bank where my donor actually donated was located in Missouri. I checked the archives and it helped me quite a bit to figure this out. http://www.archive.org/ Wendy posted this site a while back and it is awesome!!!

I have a son born --/1997 with donor ### from Procreative Technologies. When I went back to try to have a sibling for him, they had moved the donor's sperm to California Cryobank and changed his number to ####. At the time (1999) they said that they had sperm available only for people who already had children with the donor. I would love to find out if my son has any half siblings.
